AFTERNOON DISPATCHES FROM ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONSTANTINOPLE, Turkey, Sept. 11.—The agitation among the Mussulmans is being renewed with rabid fanatical fervor. A general attack upon all Christians is feared.

PARIS, France, Sept. 11.—The Mediterranean squadron of the French fleet is held in readiness for immediate despatch to the Levant.
The general policy of the Powers is to await positive action pending the conference of the Czar and the Austrian Emperor, while holding their war forces in readiness should the situation reach the state of anarchy constantly threatened. France already has two small gun-boats stationed near Constantinople as a guard over its interests and is practically acting in behalf of the Powers.

BRILLIANT MEN WHO ARE BEHIND PRISON BARS

"The Star of Hope" in Which Convicts Give Their Impressions of Prison and the World That Lies Beyond.

The publication of the Star of Hope, a paper edited and printed by the prisoners in the various prisons of this state, which was made possible through the sound judgment and humanitarianism of Superintendent of Prisons C. V. Collins, has demonstrated the fact that the movement was a wise one and one that has tended to educate the unfortunate men who have been incarcerated behind the prison walls, says the Troy (N. Y.) Budget. It also shows that there are exceedingly bright men in prison, men who have been placed there because in the course of their lives they have made some mistake at some time and have been compelled to suffer for their wrong-doings. The Star of Hope is probably one of the brightest and best edited papers of the kind in the world. The articles are contributed by men confined in the various prisons and they touch on the live topics of the day. These articles show deep thought and a fine appreciation of the subjects treated upon. It also indicates that the prisoners must have access to the newspapers of the day and to many valuable works of reference, for they write on subjects of the present and handle many of them in a masterly style. It seems a pity that men with such bright minds and intellects should be compelled to waste their lives behind prison bars. Yet such is the fate of those who violate the laws of the state.

The current issue of the Star of Hope is one of the best that has been issued. The paper has been in existence now five years and over and is published bi-weekly. Usually the men who edit such papers are men who are serving long terms in prisons and are usually among the brightest in the land. The editor-in-chief of the Star of Hope is Convict 1,500 of Sing Sing prison, and he has a staff of able assistants.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM.

In the current issue No. 26,407 of Auburn contributes an able article on "The Negro Problem." He handles the subject in a manner which indicates he has kept abreast of the times on the subject. He concludes his article thus: "The problem before us is not to be worked out by human wisdom and prudence alone. God has a hand in its solution. We need to understand, though, that honesty, sobriety and strict morality are the tests of true religion. Scriptural religion, if practised in all grades of society, will reconcile the races. Education, philanthropy and religion can and will solve the negro problem."

THOSE GOING OUT.

Convict 5,329 of Clinton contributes an interesting article on "Those Going Out." He gives them a vast amount of good advice. He points out to those who are going out the lesson that is taught by the constant stream of returning convicts who when they obtain their liberty are quickly back again. Those, he declares, go out with a fixed determination to gain a living dishonestly and illegally. He holds that society will hold the ex-convict with suspicion even though he may desire to lead an honorable life. He tells them they must expect to meet opposition in every direction, but all these things they must bear stoically and strive to overcome the prejudices by right-doing. He advises them, if they do not like prison life, to go to some place where they are not known, secure honest employment and then do nothing for which the law can call them to account. He urges them to go to those who have expressed a desire to help them, do as they say and lead honorable and honest lives and thus keep out of the prisons.

THERE ARE POETS.

Many of the prisoners write poetry and some of it is excellent. They take many kinds of subjects and deal with them in a pleasing manner. Usually they are pathetic and the following one touches the heart. It was written by Convict 27,388 of Auburn on the receipt of news of the death of his father. It follows:

"In silence and in my lonely cell,
Alone with my saddened heart—
A heart overflowing with agonizing thoughts,
While my tears, unbiddingly they start.

This prison life and ceaseless grind

Is hard enough to bear;

Sweet freedom lost, the bars in sight,

The convict's garb I wear.

Today the sad, sad message came,

It said to me: 'Your father is dead.'

The future seems a doleful blank,

And grief from heart-springs fed,

Drives Hope's sweet promptings from my breast.

My cup of bitterness now is full,

And dull despair holds sway;

There seems to be no hope for me,

Since father's passed away."

VARIOUS DEPARTMENTS.

There are various departments in the paper which are carefully edited. There is a religious page, which is devoted to religious subjects and some of the articles are exceedingly well written. Some of the prisoners delve in fiction and produce good short stories. Then there is a department of personal and "Observations" of witty sayings. Some of them follow:

Visitors galore lately.

The crops are progressing.

Bread may be the staff of life, but a little roast beef helps us along on the journey wonderfully.

Talking too much is not one of our faults.

Truth is left-handed with some men.

The way of the transgressor is hard, but some transgressors have rubber tires on their carriage wheels.

Well, old boy Sponge Cake, they tell us that you proclaim yourself an expert bookkeeper. How about it?

Visitor—When I compare your lot with mine, I feel that I have much to be thankful for.

Prisoner—When you compare lots, yes, but when you compare houses on the lots you're not in it, see?

It is with narrow souled people as it is with narrow necked bottles—the less they have in them the more noise they make in pouring it out.

No lie ever lived to die of old age.

Every time a sermon is heard without repentance the devil gives the fire another stir.

Don't regard our wasness; only our tenness, and our henceforthness.

If time is money we would like to swap our surplus supply for cash.

All men are born equal, but they soon get over it.

It is not always the other fellow that needs reforming.

Some fellows are not satisfied with justice when they get it.

There are departments for women and many of the inmates of the women's prison at Auburn contribute many interesting and instructive articles. There are departments for sporting notes, and the convicts are well posted on the standing of the great leagues. Farming notes find a conspicuous place, and fashion notes even are not omitted.

Many towns and cities have adopted what is known as the curfew law. We have it here and nowhere has it proven a greater success.

The recording angel never strikes a balance on his books by what is said of a man on his tombstone.

EDUCATIONAL DEPARTMENT.

One of the most interesting departments is that on education. This department has been most carefully edited by Convict No. 1,501, the assistant editor of the paper. Each issue contains lessons in various subjects. He has printed questions for the prisoners to solve. They have access to school books and in the next issue he gives the answers received. The convicts obtain in this manner much valuable education. Those inclined to learn are thus enabled to obtain an excellent education in mathematics, history, grammar and other subjects if they apply their minds to it. This is a department that ought to be fostered.

AN EDITOR'S FAREWELL.

Ever since the Star of Hope was started No. 1,501 has been assistant editor, and he has had charge of the Educational Department. With the current issue he severs his connection with the paper by reason of the expiration of his term at Sing Sing prison. In the last issue he issues on the editorial page his farewell address. The article is an able one and is here-with given in full:

"In this number we do our last editing, and the management of the Star falls into other hands. The last day, the last hour of our long incarceration at this institution has come.

"Rejoiced as we are at the prospect of liberty, the parting, under whatever circumstances, with those whom we have come to esteem, is always fraught with regret, and there are many among your number who have lived, and worked, and passed through long years of our 'bit' with us for whom we have conceived a sincere liking and friendship.

"But the greater our regard for one in this saddening place, the more we delight to see him go hence, and so our pleasure today, that our own turn has come, far outweighs our regret, and we cordially rejoice that we can bid our friends farewell.

"The first number of the Star of Hope was issued April 22, 1899, and it was the present editor-in-chief, No. 1,500 and myself, who conceived the idea of the paper, formulated the plans and, upon Superintendent Collins's approval, put it into execution.

"It is, therefore, perhaps not in order for us to say any word in praise of a thing with which we have been so closely associated, but certain it is, no other institutional publication in America has commanded so much attention and evoked so much commendatory comment, and it has been especially gratifying to note its enthusiastic welcome at other institutions of this sort. And as to the future of the paper, it is gratifying to know that in our successors it will have such capable managers at its helm.

"Our superintendent, Cornelius V. Collins, we affirm with confidence, possesses the right ideas of prison reform, and has justly merited all the high commendations bestowed upon him. The Star of Hope is recognized as one of the most effective of his humane schemes and right from its inception he has ever taken a deep personal, as well as official, interest in its success, and we are pleased to announce, has frequently expressed his elation at the result he predicted when he gave his sanction to its establishment. And his invariable kindness to us will constantly present itself to our minds and find an echo in our grateful hearts.

"To you, Warden Johnson, and Principal Keeper Connaughton, we are sincerely grateful for the many ways in which you have contributed to our comfort and welfare; and which have greatly encouraged us in the proper performance of our duties. To many of the officers and guards with whom our work has brought us into close association, we owe much for your patience and many courtesies extended us during the years we have spent under your charge.

"Finally, we say farewell to you, fellow prisoners; you, better than any one else can appreciate the joy that our prospective freedom gives us today, and from our own experience of that eagerness and impatient longing that possesses the hearts of those 'doing time' to reach the much-coveted goal that we have at last attained. We, in return, know how to, and do sympathize with your melancholy regret that is doubtless mingled with your pleasure at the realization of our happiness.

"But soon your turn will come, and you will be in the same position that we are now occupying—when the day shall break and the shadows flee away, and the bitter past be hardly a memory save for the friendships it has made and the lessons it has taught. And now we say:

"Farewell! A word that must be and hath been—
A sound which makes us linger; yet—farewell!"
